Doddington Hall & Estate

Built in 1595 by Robert Smythson, one of England's foremost Elizabethan Architects, Doddington Hall was completed in 1600 and has never been sold. Since 2006 Doddington has been our much-loved family home.

A visit to Doddington offers a unique insight into family life through the ages and the challenges of looking after such an estate in the 21st century.

This year, there's a unique chance to see a room never opened to the public before and a team of conservators mending the tapestries that used to hang on its walls.

There is always something new to see and do and we look forward to welcoming you to Doddington.
